STATEMENT OF UNCOMMITTED FUNDS

Preface

I am releasing this statement in accordance with section 24 of the Parliamentary Budget Officer Act 2010. That section states:

The Secretary of the Treasury is to publicly release, at the same time as the public release of the pre-election half-yearly budget review, a statement of the amount of uncommitted funds that are available (within the revised estimates of recurrent and capital expenditures) to meet any future expenditure commitments for the general government sector for the period to which the review relates.

The Act does not provide a definition of uncommitted funds. For the purposes of this statement I have adopted the following definition:

Uncommitted funds are defined as any funds over the period 2010-11 to 2013-14 which may be used by the Government to announce new services or additional asset acquisitions without impacting on the total level of expenses or capital expenditure of the general government (ie budget) sector. Uncommitted funds includes funds currently allocated or notionally set aside by the Government or by agencies, for new services or additional asset acquisitions not yet announced. Uncommitted Funds does not include available cash balances as any further drawdown from this source above that already anticipated will impact on Budget aggregates.

In preparing this statement I have completed a comprehensive review of funds held centrally and sought the assistance of heads of other government agencies to identify any uncommitted agency funds.

The intention of this statement is to provide parliamentary leaders with an indication of the funds available for new initiatives without impacting on current Budget estimates. Any expenditure (or revenue) commitment during the 2011 State Election beyond this level would worsen the financial aggregates of the general government sector.

Care should be exercised in relation to uncommitted funds held by agencies. While these funds may strictly fall within the definition of uncommitted funds, in some cases, these funds are notionally allocated to necessary programs or projects or may be required to address known risks in relation to existing levels of service provision.

While every effort has been made to identify uncommitted funds, in some instances, this has not been possible. These circumstances are outlined in the body of this statement.

Finally, it is my intention to update this Statement of Uncommitted Funds should there be any significant change in the financial circumstances of the State prior to the 2011 State Election.

1. Relationship with the Half-Yearly Review

The 2010-11 Half-Yearly Review is released by the Treasurer in accordance with section 8 of the Public Finance and Audit Act 1983. The revised estimates include both committed and uncommitted funds. The nature of these committed and uncommitted funds are addressed in each section of this statement.

The Half-Yearly Review includes government decisions to provide additional recurrent maintenance of effort funding to a number of agencies. Maintenance of effort relates to proposals to maintain existing Government services in terms of service nature, availability, quantity, quality or eligibility. It also includes any re-profiling of existing programs. While in limited circumstances funding provided for recurrent maintenance of effort may result in various government announcements, for practical reasons the inclusion of a subset of recurrent maintenance of effort within uncommitted funds is not possible.

2. Parliamentary Budget Officer

Section 23 of the Parliamentary Budget Officer Act 2010 requires the Parliamentary Budget Officer to prepare, prior to the election, a separate budget impact statement for the respective policies of each parliamentary leader.

In determining the budget impact of election promises, the Parliamentary Budget Officer will need to consider the extent to which uncommitted funds outlined in this statement are available to fund any new policy announcements.

3. Committed Funds

All budgets are predicated on a series of assumptions which are likely to differ from actual outcomes. Within this context, the Budget makes limited, but prudent provision for contingencies or risks under current policy parameters. Risk provisions are not considered to be uncommitted funds for the purpose of this statement as they represent an expected outcome. As such, any commitments against these funds would worsen the financial aggregates of the general government sector.

Agency Growth Funds

The Budget makes provision for growth in services over which there is little discretion. For example, in the area of health and disability services, funding models provide for annual increases in spending. The potential exists for these growth funds to be used to announce new services. However, because the first call on these funds is to meet emerging demand and unit cost pressures, the quantum of funds available for new services (the uncommitted component) can not be identified.

In determining the financial impact of election promises, the Parliamentary Budget Officer will be required to exercise judgement as to whether election announcements within the areas of health and disabilities can be accommodated within available agency growth funds.

Treasurer's Advance

This provision is designed to meet unforeseen expenditure commitments that may arise during the course of a financial year (ie to manage events between Budgets). A provision is made for both the expenses and capital expenditure in each financial year. While by their nature these funds are currently uncommitted, any expenditure commitments against these funds prior to the commencement of the financial year to which they relate will worsen the financial aggregates of the general government sector. These funds are therefore not considered to be uncommitted funds for the purpose of this statement.

Maintenance of Effort

An expense provision is held beyond the budget year to meet higher unit costs associated with programs which are not adequately captured through normal cost indexation, changes in the timing of approved programs, matching requirements on additional national agreements and partnerships funding and other changes in program costs on an unchanged policy basis. These funds are therefore not considered to be uncommitted funds for the purpose of this Statement. The provision for maintenance of effort associated with the 2011-12 Budget has been allocated to agencies as part of the Half-Yearly Review.

4. Uncommitted funds for recurrent initiatives

Centrally held provisions

Pending the outcome of the Energy Reform Strategy and considering the anticipated Budget results and changes in credit rating metrics, the 2010-11 Half-Yearly Review makes no general provision for new recurrent initiatives in the 2011-12 Budget. In the absence of a preparedness to worsen the Budget result, any new initiatives will need to be funded through reprioritisation, additional agency savings or by revenue enhancements.

Agency based provisions

Agency funds are largely committed for specific purposes and programs. However in some instances there is a degree of discretion over the application of funds.

The heads of all general government agencies were requested to identify any uncommitted funds available for new recurrent initiatives. The majority of agencies have advised there are no uncommitted funds.

Details of uncommitted recurrent funds reported by agencies are shown in Table 1. While the funds identified are potentially available for new policy announcements, any commitments could displace existing agency service delivery plans. Uncommitted funds held by agencies are typically set aside to manage ongoing growth, maintenance, reconfiguration or other demands or risk and are often subject to legislative constraints. Table 1 provides details of any known restrictions on the use of uncommitted recurrent funds held by agencies.

5. Uncommitted funds for new capital works initiatives

Centrally held provisions

As part of the preparation of the Half-Year Review new Maintenance of Effort capital works funding has been allocated to agencies. These funds are included within this statement on the basis that the associated projects are not yet announced.

The Half-Yearly Review also makes provision for new capital projects and variations in work-in-progress commencing in each financial year beyond 2011-12. This provision recognises the discrete nature of capital expenditure and a provision for new works in each financial year is made. However, the first call on these funds is deemed to be variations in the cost and timing of existing approved capital projects. Given this, there is limited capacity for these funds to be committed prior to the commencement of the financial year for which the funds are allocated.

Table 2 provides details of centrally held provisions for capital expenditure.

Agency based provisions

The heads of all general government agencies were requested to identify all uncommitted funds available for new capital works initiatives. The majority of agencies have advised there are no uncommitted capital funds.

Details of uncommitted capital funds reported by agencies are shown in Table 3. While the funds identified are potentially available for new capital works, any commitments could displace existing agency priorities. In addition, uncommitted funds held for capital works by agencies may be subject to legislative constraints. Table 3 provides details of any known restrictions on the use of uncommitted capital funds held by agencies.
